“ Brad was my uncle. I was a small child when he moved to Georgia. As a child, I was entertained by his quick sense of humor and fascinated by his wavy hair, the likes of which I had never seen. As I grew older, I was further fascinated by his mechanical abilities; if it had wheels or tracks, he could operate it or repair it. I stopped in to see him a few years ago when I was in Augusta, GA. We spent the better part of my visit talking about his various fishing spots on the Savannah River. He invited me to come fishing with him when I got the chance. Sadly, I missed my chance. According to all accounts, Brad, along with his brothers and sisters, came from strong Appalachian stock. Their strength and determination, as well as their talents and skills, are characteristics I appreciate as I grow older. In my eyes, Uncle Brad was a living example of those characteristics. He shall be missed.

“ Even though my name was accidentally left out of the obituary, my name is Vicki Collingsworth Murphy, 37, and Brad was my daddy. He also has a granddaughter, Ms. Morgan Murphy, 20, both of Savannah, GA.

Like many times, with the busy hustle and bustle of everyday life, raising a family, and work, we lose sight of many things we take for granite; like being able to pick up the phone just to say hello, or get in the car and just go visit, assuming they will always be around.....the harsh truth is, this is NOT the case.

I have many fond memories of being a little girl, driving back and forth up to the mountains every chance he got to take me. Stopping off at the place where the water ran right off the side of the mountain, just so I could get some "fresh mountain water" to take home with me to Georgia. Most of the time during our visit, staying with my Uncle Jerry and Aunt Marilyn, both, now gone too. Oh, how I loved being able to play with Gail and that house of theirs with the cool staircase going down into the basement, (at least this is how I remember it).

Then, we grow up. We get "too" busy.....and so on. The biggest deception that I believe we face in life. I hope my daddy knows, if I could do it all over again, I would. We never know when the Lord is going to call us or a loved one home, but when he does, that is his timing and we are not to question it.

May my daddy Rest In Peace.
