“ Stephen was my closest friend in high school. He took me under his wing as an eighth grader coming into the high school for the first time as I was very shy and felt awkward at times. All through high school he kept me laughing at his funny antics. We played football together and when he got his drivers license, he would take me on many trips with him and his mother. He encouraged me when I had doubts about my ability to make something of myself. I'll always remember his mischivious smile when he was able to pull a harmless prank on someone (especially his mother). After I went off to college and he went to the army, we lost touch for several years. But, the few times I've seen him over the last few years (at class reunions), we shared some good memories. I will miss him!
